Aquaculture Farm Assistance Program FAQ

What is the Aquaculture Farm Assistance Program?

The Aquaculture Farm Assistance Program (AFAP) is a service that provides confidential, professional counselling services to aquaculture members and their families. The program recognizes that some problems can affect home life and work performance. When this happens, help may be required in resolving these problems through the assistance of a trained professional counsellor. These counselors are trained to provide short-term counselling or refer you to other professional services and resources in the community.

Who Qualifies?

Members and their immediate family qualify for this service. Farm employees may be eligible if they have Group Health Benefits provided by the farm.

What kind of problems does the AFAP help resolve?

The AFAP will help you deal with a wide range of problems that affect your personal well-being and work performance. These problems may include work or family pressures, job stress, alcohol or drug dependency, marital problems, children's issues or other conflict. The AFAP counselors have a wide range of experience in a variety of problem areas including:

- Stress and anxiety
- Trauma/critical illness
- Alcohol and drug misuse
- Bereavement
- Couple and marital
- Depression
- Elder care concerns
- Family matters/parenting concerns
- Counselling with children and teens
- Legal matters
- Financial concerns
- Learning disabilities
- Grief counselling
- Career counselling
- Anger management

Is this service confidential?

Yes, your privacy is protected by strict confidentiality laws and regulations and by professional ethical standards for counsellors. The details of your discussions with the counsellor will not be released to anyone including management, without your written consent, with the exception when information must be provided to others, whether or not consent is given such as when a person appears to post a threat of serious injury to themselves or others. Counsellors are also legally required to report suspicion of child abuse and to disclose information required by law.
